There are three parts to this reading list and course. Part I is an introduction to some of the basic themes of the course, viz., the significant differences between political economy and mainstream economics and the existence both of different theories of political economy and of various ways of understanding those differences. Part II covers the basic concepts and methods of the principle "schools" encompassed by contemporary political economy: Marxian, classical, post-Keynesian, radical, institutionalist, Austrian, feminist, and postcolonial. Finally, in Part III we will discuss the different consequences of these theories by examining some specific issues and themes: justice, globalization, politics, and alternatives to capitalism.

READINGS

No textbook is required for this course. The only three books you need to purchase are The Ultimate Field Guide to the U.S. Economy, by James Heintz et al.; Economics: Marxian versus Neoclassical, by Richard D. Wolff and Stephen A. Resnick; and Deirdre McCloskey's Economical Writing (2d ed). All of the remaining readings are from 2 "course packets" available at the Copy Shop, O'Shaughnessy Hall.

ORGANIZATION

The course will be conducted as a seminar. Therefore, it is important for all students to complete the assigned readings before each session and to participate in the discussions.

GRADING

There will be no examinations in this course. Instead, students will prepare weekly papers, each approximately 1.5 to 2 pages, due each Tuesday in class. One of the purposes of the papers is to "grapple" with the readings—to formulate the main themes, to raise the interesting issues, to pose the key questions—in preparation for the classroom discussions. I will be looking for serious, thoughtful, and well-written engagements with the readings. The other purpose is to develop ideas for an 8-10-page final research paper. For that paper, students should choose a specific topic, concept, or theme from the readings and then explore it in more depth than is possible in the required readings and class discussions. Students should feel free to contact me—in person, by office telephone, or by email—to discuss paper topics, ways of investigating the topics, and possible references. An abstract and reading list for the paper are due on 23 November. The paper itself is due by 5pm on the regularly scheduled final exam day.
