

The log canonical threshold is an invariant of singularities which plays an important role in higher dimensional birational geometry. It appears in many settings, from complex powers, to Igusa zeta functions and arc spaces. I will give an overview of these topics with emphasis on the approach via arcs and jets. In the end, I will describe a conjectural connection with invariants coming from commutative algebra in positive characteristic.