

The Asian Indian Classical Music Society
52318 N Tally Ho Drive, South Bend, IN 46635

Indian Classical Music Concerts

Umakant and Ramakant Gundecha (dhrupad vocal) with Akhilesh Gundecha (pakhawaj)

April 15, 2012, Sunday, 7.00PM

Hesburgh Center for International and Peace Studies Auditorium

The Gundecha brothers are the leading exponents of the Dhrupad style of music among the younger generation and the most active performers in that style both in India and abroad. Dhrupad is the most ancient form of Hindustani classical music which still survives in its original form.

Rupak Kulkarni (Flute)

with Subhen Chatterjee (tabla)

April 29, 2012, Sunday, 7.00PM

Hesburgh Center for International and Peace Studies Auditorium

Rupak Kulkarni is a disciple of the world-renowned bamboo flute Maestro Pandit Hari Prasad Chaurasia and a torch bearer of the Maihar Gharana, made famous around the world by Ustad Ali Akbar Khan and Pandit Ravi Shankar. Combining the elements of the earlier dhrupad and later khayal forms, he has performed widely in India, the US, the UK, Russia, Japan and France.

Tickets available at gate.

General Admission: $10, AICMS Members and ND/SMC faculty: $5, Students: FREE

For further information, contact: Amitava Dutt (2730928) or Samir Bose (2726970)