A1 – Why are you keeping your pictures a secret? For the last time, put them on your site! I know you have them, I’ve seen them in your PDRs, now just post them online. If you’re morally opposed to posting pictures or CAD models, at least change something on your site from week to week.

A2 – Amusing “About Us” page, but your website is lacking a major component – pictures, graphics, images, CAD models! Just like group A2, I know you have them, I’ve seen them in your PDRs...post them!

A3 –CAD model on the front page, new updates in the “News” sidebar, even graphs and pictures of your prototype – great job. Only suggestion would be to visually organize your “Documentation” page. Have each heading available under a sidebar menu or something of that sort...be creative.

B1 – Nice CAD model on the front page, however I would suggest adding a caption to explain what part of your project a viewer is seeing. Meeting minutes have also declined recently, make sure that you keep those up to date. Also, you need to post your PDRs every week. I just received Dr. Batill’s email regarding the menus on top of the website – I’m using Firefox and have no problem seeing them...(from Batill - I checked once again and still have the problem - probably not something you need to deal with)

B2 – We’re to the point in the year when you should be able to have a “Product Detail” page that isn’t under construction. Tell the world how your project is coming along! Like some other groups, your site is in desperate need of images, graphics, pictures, and/or CAD models! Also, you need to be posting your TTS and PDRs weekly.

B3 – Same as groups A1 and A2, why are you hiding the CAD models?! I know you have them, I’ve seen them in your PDRs...now post them! Good job on more frequent updates – the “Latest News” column looks much better.

C1 – Same as the rest, it is imperative that you post graphics on your website. Not much looks like it has changed from last time. A “Recent Updates” column would contribute to the site greatly including some sort of abstract, introduction, or welcome for your homepage.
