Spring 2011 Courses

Please note:

- All course descriptions online. HESB course descriptions for Spring 2011 are also available on the bulletin board near the office, 337 O'Shaughnessy.
- All HESB classes require approval: Come to our office to be advised and get approval for HESB labeled courses.
- NON-HESB labeled courses are not handled through the Hesburgh Program Office: Go to the appropriate department(s) if approval is needed for NON-HESB labeled courses.
- Most of our curriculum consists of cross-listed courses. You need to register for HESB classes ASAP after you receive approval because many departments check online regularly and reclaim unused seats for their own students.

Very Good News:

Professor David Betson has chosen the Hesburgh Program as his new home. David is a long standing supporter and mentor of the Hesburgh Program, having helped create the program over 2 decades ago. He served as Director of the program and has taught several policy related courses.

Starting with Spring Semester 2011, David will offer 2 new courses: Analyzing Public Policy which will fulfill a Tools elective requirement, and Spending, Taxes, Deficit which will be offered as a Senior Seminar. David's research and teaching interests are firmly grounded in policy. With him, you will have the opportunity to deepen your understanding of the substance and analysis of public decision making. Consider taking one or both of his classes and let us all welcome him "back" to the Program.

Prerequisites

Both Economics and American Politics are prerequisites for the minor. Students who have not fulfilled the prerequisite(s) through AP Credit or during their First Year of Studies should enroll in one or both of the following ASAP.

Economics

HESB 20002-06 Principles of Microeconomics (ECON 10011/20011) 11:45-12:35 MWF Pant

Political Science

HESB 20000-01 American Politics (POLS 10100/20100) 02:00-03:15 TR Campbell

Gateway Course: Introduction to Public Policy

"Introduction to Public Policy" is the gateway course for the interdisciplinary minor curriculum. It is required for all minors and offered once a year in the spring.

HESB 20010, "Introduction to Public Policy," Professor De Ridder MW 1:30-2:45

This course explores the process, substance, and efficacy of public policy making and implementation in the United States. Attention is given to how government identifies problems and formulates policies meant to address them. The course examines the policy process, and also focuses on the substance of public policies through the work of student research teams, debates, and case studies.

The course is open to students who are in the Hesburgh Program and have completed (or are in the process of completing) Introduction to American Government and Introduction to Economics.

Electives

To complete the Hesburgh Program curriculum, a student must complete 3 elective courses; one in Research Tools, one in Values, and one in Institutions and Processes. Please choose your electives outside your major(s) or other minor(s).

1. Research Tools

These courses provide the student with an introduction to the tools and methods that are used to structure empirical evidence to inform public policy. Research Tools courses can be broadly defined in two categories. One group offers students training in rational analysis. Another group of courses introduces tools and methods for analyzing empirical evidence.

The following courses fulfill the “Research Tools” requirement. (Choose one)

For all HESB courses, get approval from the Hesburgh Office.

Hesburgh Program Course

HESB 30015 Analyzing Public Policy 11:45-01:00 MW Betson

Description: Public policy can be viewed as the adoption of a collective response to a perceived problem facing society. But what differentiates one course of action from another? What makes one policy better than others? This course will provide students with instruction into the welfare economics paradigm as a basis to develop and analyze policy alternatives.

Please Note: This is a new course created by Professor David Betson. As the course description indicates, this course is at the heart of the study of public policy, a must for any student who is considering post-undergraduate studies in public policy or a joint degree with a policy emphasis.

HESB 30101-01 Statistics for Social Research (SOC 30903) 08:00-09:15 MW Kelly

2. Values

The Values section addresses two different value dimensions of public policy. First, public policy choices are made within a context of assumed values and preferences. Second, we assess policy choices and their consequences in light of ethical arguments and claims. Values courses contribute to the student's capacity for reflection about normative aspects of public policy. What is the idea of the good that we seek to achieve through a specific policy? Values courses may also introduce the student to analytic tools for assessing the ethical implications of public policy choices.

The following courses fulfill the “Values” requirement. (Choose one)

Off Campus Elective Offerings

Students participating in an off campus program, may be able to count some of their courses toward elective requirements in the Hesburgh Program. Please come to our office with a course description to discuss such a possibility for all off campus offerings except those in London and in Washington

Please Note: You may take up to 2 courses (6 hours) off campus to fulfill minor requirements.

In London

HESB 24200 Philosophy of Law (PHIL 24408)
Above course fulfills a "Values" requirement.

In Washington

Consider the following courses to fulfill some of your elective requirements for the Hesburgh Program:

POLS 34310 Lobbying, Money and Influence in Washington
AMST 34103 American Political Journalism
Above 2 courses fulfill an "Institutions and Processes" requirement.

HESB 34091 Foundations of Public Policy
PHIL 24408 Philosophy of Law
Above 2 courses fulfill a “Values” requirement.

Capstone/Senior Policy Seminars

Please Note:

- All Hesburgh minors are to enroll in a Capstone Policy Seminar during their senior year.
- 2010 Lyman Interns fulfilled this requirement in Fall 2010 with HESB 43020, Research Seminar in Public Policy.
- SENIORS who need to fulfill their senior policy requirement receive priority for “HESB” labeled seminars.
- You may register for a senior policy seminar in your own major(s) provided the seminar does not count toward fulfillment of your major(s) requirements.
- If you are aware of a seminar with policy content not listed here, and you wish to enroll in this class to fulfill your senior policy requirement, please come to our office with the course information to receive permission prior to registering for the class.

The following courses fulfill the Capstone/Senior Policy Seminar requirement. (Choose one)

For all HESB courses, get approval from the Hesburgh Office.

Hesburgh Program Course

HESB 43040 Spending, Taxes, Deficit 01:30-02:45 MW Betson

Description: In 2001, Alan Greenspan expressed his concern to Congress with the speed by which the country was reducing the federal debt. A decade later, the black ink of the federal budget has been replaced with red and the once shrinking debt is now growing to the public’s consternation. This course will examine two main questions: What factors are responsible for this about face in the direction of federal debt and what decisions will the nation confront to restore long run fiscal balance?

Please Note: This is a new course under Professor David Betson’s direction; a great capstone seminar to conclude your minor curriculum. Should be a requirement for all incoming members of Congress!
