Seas thwart survivor search

U.S. Coast Guard personnel offload one of two bodies recovered from the freezing North Pacific after the ore freighter Lee Wang Chin capsized south of Ketchikan, Alaska. High seas on Friday again thwarted attempts to drop U.S. Navy divers to the 741-foot ship, in which crew members might be trapped in air pockets. The ship overturned Tuesday. It was believed to be carrying a crew of 30 Taiwanese. The Navy officer in charge of rescue said another attempt to reach the ship would be made Saturday.

Marcella A. Niehoff dies; longtime medical benefactor

MARCELLA A. NIEHOFF, a longtime benefactor of medical education, hospitals, and crippled children, died Friday in her home at 179 N. Lake Shore Dr. She was 80.

Gifts from Mrs. Niehoff benefited Resurrection Hospital, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, and Loyola University's Stritch School of Medicine. A recent endowment to Loyola's nursing school will be used to establish a professorship in her name.

For 15 years she was a member of the Resurrection Hospital Advisory Board. She was also an honorary alumna of Loyola and a director of the Cosmopolitan National Bank of Chicago.

HER HUSBAND, the late Conrad E. Niehoff, was founder of C.E. Niehoff and Co., an auto parts firm at 4925 W. Lawrence Ave. An intensive care and rehabilitation facility at Resurrection Hospital was named in his honor.

Mass for Mrs. Niehoff will be at 10 a.m. Monday in Holy Name Cathedral, 735 N. State St. In lieu of flowers, the family asks that donations be made to Resurrection Hospital, the Alexian Brothers Medical Center, or the Loyola School of Nursing.

Mrs. Niehoff is survived by a daughter, Mary Ann Kirchschlager; a brother; a grandson; and a great-grandson.

Philanthropist Dellora A. Norris dies

DELLORA ANGELL NORRIS, 77, of St. Charles, a multimillionaire and lifelong philanthropist, died Friday at Delnor Hospital, St. Charles, an institution built largely with contributions from Mrs. Norris.

In 1918, at the age of 15, Dellora Angell was a chief beneficiary in the will of her uncle, John W. "Bet a Million" Gates. The estate was reported at various times at upwards of $38 million. Another uncle, the late Col. Edward J. Baker, was co-beneficiary in the will.

In 1923, she married Lester J. Norris, a childhood playmate who was working as a Chicago cartoonist.

During a lifetime of philanthropy, Mrs. Norris contributed large sums of money and property to build educational, civil, and health facilities both in the Chicago area and in Naples, Fla.

THE NORRISSES AND Baker combined to contribute the money to build a combination city hall and power plant and the land upon which to build it in St. Charles.

In 1940, the Norrises contributed land, money, and equipment for the establishment of Delnor Hospital, St. Charles, so named for the first three letters of Mrs. Norris' first and last names.

In 1969, Mrs. Norris was named the chief beneficiary in the will of Baker, who died in January of that year at 90. Her share was estimated to be in the millions.

In 1961, the Norrises contributed 51 acres of land upon which was built St. Dominic College, St. Charles. The college has since been sold. They also contributed 70 acres in 1969 for the site of St. Charles Junior and Senior High schools.

The Norris University Center, on Northwestern's Evanston campus, was built in large part with the $2.5 million given by the Norrises. It was dedicated
