

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

SAMANTHA BERTRAND received her M.A. in Philosophy from the Franciscan University of Steubenville in 2012. She is currently working in religious education in the Archdiocese of Washington, doing rogue philosophy in contemporary phenomenological thought, on the side.

JAMES CAPEHART is a doctoral student of philosophy at the Center for Thomistic Studies at the University of St. Thomas in Houston. He is currently working on his dissertation under the direction of R. E. Houser on the topic of Étienne Gilson and the Problem of Christian Philosophy.

JOHN J. CONLEY, S.J. holds the Francis J. Knott Chair in Philosophy and Theology at Loyola University Maryland in Baltimore. He specializes in ethics, aesthetics, and French philosophy. Recent monographs include Adoration and Annihilation: The Convent Philosophy of Port-Royal (University of Notre Dame Press, 2009).

DANIEL D. DE HAAN is a doctoral student in philosophy at the University of St. Thomas in Houston and the Katholieke Universiteit Leuven in Belgium. His research interests include philosophical anthropology and metaphysics, especially within the thought of Avicenna and Thomas Aquinas. He is the recipient of the American Catholic Philosophical Association's Young Scholar Award, the Metaphysical Society of America's Aristotle Prize, and the American Maritain Association's Yves R. Simon Institute Graduate Student Award. Starting in 2014, he will be a postdoctoral research associate in the Theology, Philosophy of Religion, and the Sciences Project: Neuroscience Strand, directed by Sarah Coakley, Faculty of Divinity and the Translational Cognitive Neuroscience Lab at Cambridge University.

BERNARD DOERING is Professor Emeritus of French at the University of Notre Dame. His main research interest is Jacques Maritain, his thought and his influence. He recently published his English translation of Simone Weil: Attention to the Real (University of Notre Dame Press, 2012).

JOHN MARSON DUNAWAY is Professor of French and Interdisciplinary Studies at Mercer University in Macon, Georgia. His publications have centered on French religious writers, notably Jacques Maritain, Simone Weil, and the Catholic novelists. His translation of Vladimir Volkoff's novel L'Hôte du Pape/The Pope's Guest was recently published by Mercer University Press.

HEATHER MCADAM ERB is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Lock Haven University of Pennsylvania. Her area of research lies in the nexus between metaphysics and mysticism in the thought of Aquinas, as well as medieval philosophy and issues in Catholic culture. She recently published "The Varieties of Wisdom and The Consolation of Philosophy" in Logos: A Journal of Catholic Thought and Culture.

JOSUHA HREN is Assistant Professor of English and Catholic Studies at the University of Mary, and Editor-in-Chief of Wiseblood Books, a publisher rooted in the Catholic literary tradition. He is currently translating Charles Péguy's play The Mystery of the Charity of Joan of Arc. He recently published "Love of Mankind: The Genealogy of Ressentiment and the Achilles' Heel of Amour-Propre" in Logos: A Journal of Catholic Thought and Culture.

JAMES F. KEATING is Associate Professor of Theology at Providence College. His writing focuses on the intersection between historical research and Christology, the theology of Wolfhart Pannenberg, and contemporary moral theology. He recently published (with Thomas Joseph White) "Divine Impassibility in Contemporary Moral Theology" in Divine Impassibility and the Mystery of Human Suffering (Eerdmans, 2009).

JOHN F. X. KNASAS is Professor of Philosophy at the Center for Thomistic Studies at the University of St. Thomas in Houston. His most recent publication is Aquinas and the Cry of Rachel: Thomistic Reflections on the Problem of Evil (Catholic University of America Press, 2013).

MICHAEL NOVAK is currently Distinguished Visiting Professor at Ave Maria University in Naples, Florida. He was the recipient of the Templeton

Prize and on three occasions served as a U.S. ambassador under President Ronald Reagan. His latest book is a personal memoir, Writing from Left to Right: My Journey from Liberal to Conservative (Image, 2013).

ROGER W. NUTT is Associate Professor of Theology and Director of the Master of Arts in Theology at Ave Maria University in Naples, Florida. His research focuses on medieval Christology and sacramental theology. He recently published "Faith, Metaphysics, and the Contemplation of Christ's Corporeal Presence in the Eucharist" in Antiphon: A Journal of Liturgical Renewal.

BERNADETTE E. O'CONNOR is Professor of Philosophy at the University of the Incarnate Word in San Antonio. Her research interests include Thomistic metaphysics, Heideggerian Seinsdenken, and the philosophy of Jacques Maritain. Her most recent publication is "The Freudian and Maritainian Theories of Sublimation and Their Ontological Bases" in the American Maritain Association volume on Scholasticism and Politics.

THOMAS R. ROURKE is Professor of Politics at Clarion University in Clarion, Pennsylvania. His research interests are religion and politics, with an emphasis on Catholic Social Thought. He recently published The Social and Political Thought of Benedict XVI (Rowman and Littlefield, 2011).

RANDALL B. SMITH is Professor of Theology at the University of St. Thomas, Houston, where he holds the Scanlan Chair in Theology. He teaches primarily in the area of moral theology and publishes regularly in Crisis and The Catholic Thing. Two forthcoming books treat divine order and justice in Homer's Iliad and Odyssey and the sermons of Thomas Aquinas.

C. A. TSAKIRIDOU is Associate Professor of Philosophy at La Salle University. She specializes in aesthetics and metaphysics. She recently published Icons in Time, Persons in Eternity: Orthodox Theology and the Aesthetics of the Christian Image (Ashgate, 2013).

ANNE M. WILES is Professor of Philosophy at James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Virginia. She is the author of several articles on the epistemology and metaphysics of Plato and Aristotle as well as articles on Wittgenstein, Dante, and Tagore.

NIKOLAJ ZUNIC is Associate Professor of Philosophy at St. Jerome's University in Waterloo, Ontario. His research interests include philosophical anthropology, particularly the tradition of Christian personalism, the philosophy of religion, and metaphysics. He has published articles in Martinian Studies, American Catholic Philosophical Quarterly, and The Heythrop Journal.